The GMHPN is a global lived experience organization that functions as an entity of its own that strives to ensure that the voice of mental health care users, wherever in the world, have the platform to share their experiences, views and opinions in a well-established and sustainable structure.

Two principles are fundamental to the GMHPN:

- Working together with all stakeholders involved to affect the desired change
- The views, opinions and experiences of mental health care users reflect the change desired

Through the principles, the objectives of the GMHPN are to:

- Create communities where mental health care users are valued as equal citizens of the world, free from stigma, inequality and inequity
- Give a voice to the voiceless and create a platform where what mental health care users say and share, matters
- End isolation from the world and connect user groups and movements globally to form a community of experts by experience and who are empowered to self-advocate and advocate on a boarder and global scale
